The Teaching Kitchen: Free Training for Nonprofits

BPHC is pleased to share this opportunity available to community-based organizations (CBOs) that prepare and serve food to patients and clients. The Lenox Hill Neighborhood House Teaching Kitchen offers free training and technical assistance in the preparation of healthy meals and the transition to cooking with fresh, locally-produced farm fresh foods.

The Teaching Kitchen helps non-profit organizations prepare meals using more fresh fruits, vegetables, whole grains and less sugar, fat and salt – without increasing costs.

Several BPHC member organizations, including senior centers and CBOs, have given high ratings to this program.

The Teaching Kitchen provides a one-day food business course and hands-on training followed by technical assistance, guidance in goal setting, professional development workshops, recipes and more.

Have you visited BronxResourceDirectory.org?

BPHC has developed an online directory of our members and the health and community services they offer.

We’ve had a very positive response from agencies that find it a very useful tool in identifying local resources for the community members you serve. This directory is available to all organizations and the public.
